Knox Box Information

Properties which are equipped with an automatic fire detection and alarm system will periodically experience false alarms. When the fire department arrives if a key holder is not available to unlock the property then we have only two choices. Either we wait for a key holder to arrive or we force entry. Obviously if there are any visible signs of fire we will force entry. However it is possible for fire to be burning in an interior room and damage can be extensive prior to arrival of a key holder.

The Knox Box provides the property owner with a secure location to store any necessary keys. Our responding fire officers will have a master key to access the Knox Box and allow immediate entry to check for fire. A key holder must still respond so the fire department has someone to verify that the property is again secure after fire operations are complete.

To purchase a Knox Box, go to the website at www.knoxbox.com for pricing and to select the box you wish to purchase. We suggest you purchase a 3200 series unit with lift off door. It is your choice to purchase either the surface mount model or the one you can recess mount in the wall. When you order on-line and enter our fire district information, the box will be keyed correctly. Once the box arrives, please give me a call and I will be glad to provide a suggestion on the best place to mount it.

If you have any questions or need further assistance, please feel free to give me a call.
